Thy Will Be Done

Lesson for March 8, 1959

A STRANGER to the Christian religion would be struck by two things. One is that the church cherishes much that she does not understand; and the other is that the church loves to remember what the stranger would think we should wish to forget.

Dr. Foreman

The story of Gethsemane is one that every Christian knows. The first three gospels all tell it in some detail. Every communion service begins with the words, "The Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed..." The Gethsemane story is one of anguish of mind and soul, a story of Jesus offering an unanswered prayer—"let this cup pass."

There is no doubt about Jesus' distress in Gethsemane. Matthew, Mark and Luke all testify to it. Mark says that Jesus "began to be greatly distressed and troubled." The word Mark uses which is translated "greatly distressed" in Mark 14:33 is the same word he uses in 9:15 to describe the crowd's astonishment when they saw him after the Transfiguration. It is the same word also in 16:5 and 6, speaking of the amazement of the women at the tomb when they saw the white-robed angel. It is the emphatic form of a word used in Acts 9:8 (King James version) to describe Saul's emotions when stricken to the ground on the Damascus Road. It is a word meaning more than surprise; it is shock. The whole story of Gethsemane holds right up to this word that begins it. Jesus prays in such intensity that sweat poured from his forehead like so much blood. He describes his own feelings as "very sorrowful, even to death." The church does not remember Jesus as a man always serene. One of the early Christian writers speaks of Christ as offering up "prayers and supplications with loud cries and tears." (Heb. 5:7.)

"Not What I Will—"

There is a darker shadow than this. You would think, if you were a stranger to the Christian faith, that if ever there had been a time when Jesus felt his own will and his Father's will were not the same, the church would prefer to forget that fact. Would it not be better, more edifying, more comforting—would it not make Christ a nobler figure, if we could think of him as at every point and in every moment desiring only what his heavenly Father desired, never anything different?

No—if the church had been inventing the story, they would probably have invented it just that way. But the church was dealing with facts, not theories. And in this story of Gethsemane we are further mystified by hearing Jesus say, "Not what I will, but what Thou wilt." Any one who thinks he knows exactly what Jesus meant by that, is guessing. What is plain, if we honestly and humbly listen, is that there was enough difference between what Jesus desired, or would prefer, and what his Father in heaven preferred, so that he could say, Not this—but that!

Our Lord and Ourselves

Yet immediately, in the same breath, Jesus cries out "what thou wilt." Jesus was not at that moment giving a lesson in prayer. Nevertheless that is the most profound lesson in prayer which we can learn. We all know by heart the prayer which Jesus taught us, and we rattle it off easily enough. But every phase of it is hard to say honestly, and none harder than this: "Thy will be done." That is just fine when we think God wants what we want, and is sitting up there in the sky like a heavenly Pixer, arranging for all our sweet dreams to come true. That is fine too even when we can see God is not going to let our dreams come true, provided we can see that God has a better plan and we know what the plan is. But what about it, if we become sure that God is against our own plans, that God is not "fixing things" for us, and yet we cannot see why? What about it if our knowing what God's will is, brings us also to cries and tears, to amazement and distress? Well . . . then we can find light in dark Gethsemane.

Wheat Quota Penalty Upheld

The law governing the wheat marketing quota program has been found constitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court and excess wheat will continue to be subject to marketing quota penalties even though it is fed to livestock on the farm, according to word received by chairman W .D. Hix, III, of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

The Supreme Court's ruling, Mr. Hix said, came in the Texas case of U. S. vs. Haley. In that case—a civil suit to collect marketing quota penalties—a Federal Judge ruled that the wheat marketing quota provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 were unconstitutional .He held that if all wheat produced on a farm is used or consumed on the farm there is no farm marketing excess subject to penalty.

This decision was appealed by the Government and was reversed by a unanimous vote of the Supreme Court on Feb. 24, 1959. The Supreme Court cited its original 1942 decision that the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 was constitutional.

ROAD FUND IS TO BE 15% LESS THAN 1958

Money worries consumed most of the time of Appomattox Supervisors at the regular March meeting yesterday. The March meeting is the occasion for the annual hearing on roads, and meeting with the resident highway engineer and with citizens seeking new roads or road improvements.

It was found yesterday that funds available this year for secondary roads will be reduced by approximately 15% from last year. This will have an effect on any road improvements, new surfacing, or addition of new mileage.

The cut in secondary funds is statewide, and reflects increasing costs of highway work, and the apparents diversion of funds to provide the state's share in the planned Federal Interstate Highway system.

Not too many citizens appeared at the road hearing yesterday. Most of those appearing were seeking action on road proposals delayed from previous years.

PLAN BORROWING INSTEAD OF AN INCREASE IN LEVY

The County Board of Supervisors decided yesterday to submit a financial budget for the forthcoming fiscal year that would not call for an increase in the county tax rate. In order to do this, the Board accepted a budget proposal which calls for approximately $30,000 in borrowings for the coming year, in lieu of a tax increase.

The county had committed itself to support an increase in funds for school teacher salaries. It had been planned to inance this increase by means of a $10 county auto vehicle license plate. However, this was discarded when it was ruled that the county and town of Appomattox could not share or duplicate the vehicle tags. That left the county without means of financing the increase in teacher pay. The Supervisors now plan to borrow money to operate for the coming year, in the hope that state legislation will provide more state school funds, by means of a state sales tax or some other source of revenue.

The present tax rate is $2.50 per $100 of valuation.

The proposed county budget will be published in next week's issue of this newspaper, and a date will be announced for a public hearing on same before final action on its adoption.

A. H. S. BASKETBALL TEAM AT BLACKSBURG FOR TOURNAMENT

Appomattox High School is wearing the crown in basketball honors in its league, District IV of Group II, Virginia High School Athletic League. The crown was won in a final round match with the champion of the southern half of the loop, William Campell, at Rustburg, last Friday night. With Carl Carter once again leading the scoring procession, Coach Gordon Bragg's warriors added the district title to the northern half they had already won by defeating Nelson County H. S. in an earlier tournament. Appomattox ended the play with a 17 won and one lost record.

The next step is a trek to Blacksburg, Va., where all division champs will engage in a state-wide tournament.

In first round pairings, Appomattox will go up against Southampton High School, winners in District I, in a tilt at 2:00 P .M. this afternoon. Southampton had a 13 to 6 record during the season's play, and got into the state tournament by defeating Franklin 53 to 45 in the District 1 final round.

Buckingham High School is also in the state play-offs,

The Buckingham team will meet Bassett at 4:00 P. M. today. Buena Vista and Bassett H. S. have been set up as pre-tournament favorites, and general lack of cross-division competition makes each of the teams in the state meeting a "dark-horse" entry.

Games in the tournament will continue Friday and Saturday, until a state winner is selected. Games on Friday will be played at 7:15 and 8:45. The same hours will be used on Saturday, with the opening game being for the "consolation" game title, or third place in the state.

Buena Vista is ranked highly because it goes into the tournament as undefeated.

This will be the fourth appearance of Buckingham in state title play, and the second.

Watershed Tour Visits County

Some 50 farmers and county officials, Soil Conservation District Supervisors from six Southside Virginia Counties visited Tuesday for a watershed tour of Appomattox County.

On the tour, the group observed land use patterns resulting from careful farm planning and noted the effectiveness of various land treatment used to conserve soil, water, and to increase fertility and improve soil structure on the highlands.

The tour was guided by T. Ed Dickerson, Work Unit Conservationist, of Appomattox.

The group visited two flood retarding structures where flood water is temporarily trapped and allowed to drain slowly to prevent downstream flood.

These structures are part of 62 pilot projects in the United States set up to make studies of practical and effective ways of preventing soil and water losses upland and for controlling floods on headwaters of small streams. The entire project has been designated the upstream flood control.

The group observed stream channel improvement and work done on main stream and tributaries to improve water carrying capacity, thus reducing the number of times a stream would overflow its bank.
